How to Card Instore With Confidence

This article is to help the newbies card instore without shitting their pants. I wish I had read this when I was first starting out because I was scared ~~shits~~ when I started out. Sometimes I would get scared and not go through with it. I would drink a little beer or pop pills to get me over the fear. However now, it is quite different and my confidence level is 100 times more than it used to be. The goal of this article is to give you some tips and tricks to get you through your instore instore carding trips until it becomes second nature.

Step 1: Look like you have money.

When I take partners on road trips, I have a dress code believe it or not. No baggy jeans, nice belts, button up shirts or polos, well trimmed hair and clean shaved. Listen people, do NOT underestimate the power of clothes. I have some training in loss prevention and profiling customers does exist. This means that if you look like your gonna steal something in the store then your going to attract more attention and attention is something a carder doesn't want.

Question?

Have you ever wore a suit and tie? When you were walking around did you feel more powerful? Or at work when you wear a tie, do you gain more respect? For most people the answer is yes so dress nice!

Answer

Ok here is a tip. *If you are carding during the week and during business hours. Try wearing dress clothes, slacks with button up shirt tucked in. Wear a tie if your into that. The reason is that you are working and left work to pickup some gifts or new replacement laptop.

*If your carding during week and in the evening then you can look a little more sloppier because after-all you had a long day at work. Dress slacks, shirt untucked, no tie.

*Weekend carding is a little more casual but don't wear sandals or flip flops either. Some nice jeans(not too baggy) and polo shirt works just fine.

Step 2: Take your time. And be patient.

When you are spending your real money, how often do you walk into a department and pickup a $1,100 item and buy it without comparing models or prices or asking questions? Not often. Loss prevention is also trained to look for people like this. So be patient and
